Senate Bill No. 1186

INTRODUCED BY HON. MANNY VILLAR

EXPLANATORY NOTE

The continuing and alarming deterioration of the environment necessitates a more aggressive effort at environment rehabilitation, conservation, protection and preservation which involves the collective participation of all sectors of society.

In line with the popular idiom being propagated by environmentalists around the globe, "Think Globally, Act Locally," this bill seeks to generate and institutionalize the role and participation of cultural indigenous communities in the effective utilization, management, protection and conservation of the country's remaining forests and their resources as well as in rehabilitating degraded forests.

Indigenous cultural communities in the country have proven their effectiveness in such efforts through the employment of indigenous customs and practices. Thus, the proposed establishment of forest management centers in provinces predominantly populated by members of indigenous cultural communities. This aims to enhance forest rehabilitation, protection, and conservation by building on indigenous practices of doing the same.

At the same time, such Centers are also expected to play major roles in the continuing efforts to uplift the conditions of indigenous cultural communities with the creation of additional sources of livelihood through an effective and sustainable utilization of their forest resources.

Considering the great impact this could make on environmental conservation efforts and in the uplift of the conditions of our indigenous cultural communities, approval of this proposed measure is earnestly sought.
